

Corn Belt to Build a New Hatchery Here

Corn Belt Hatcheries of Arkansas has sold the incubators and hatchery supplies located at 113 East Third Street, Hope, to Hope Feed Mills. It was announced today by Freddie Roth, Greenan, president.

According to Mrs. Greenan, this transaction in no way affects Corn Belt's activities at El Dorado, or in Rusk, Texas, where hatcheries are located, nor does it effect the Corn Belt hatching egg producers or pullet growers who are working with Corn Belt.

Mrs. Greenan stated that Corn Belt Hatcheries would be building a new modern hatchery adjacent to the Corn Belt offices located on Rocky Mount Road. In the meantime, the Mountain Poultry Company will hatch Hy-Line chickens for Corn Belt Hatcheries at the 3rd Street location.

The hatchery will be known as the Mountain Hatchery and will be operated and baby chicks delivered under the overall supervision of Neely Cassidy of Nashville, Ark. Mr. Cassidy is a partner in the Mountain Poultry Company, along with Hope Feed Mills and others. This company is engaged in hatching, growing and processing broiler chicks in the Nashville, DeQueen and Hope areas. The Mountain Poultry Company is not planning any personnel changes at the hatchery.

"The blonde actress Sunday night checked out of the hospital where she had been resting for what her doctor termed acute exhaustion."

Her husband, writer Arthur Miller, stayed in a nearby hotel while Marilyn was in the hospital. She flew here last week from Reno. Her press agent said the 34-year-old actress was suffering the effects of working six days a week in the hot Nevada sun.

Hurricane May Bypass Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Mighty Hurricane Donna curved slightly northward today to a course that bypassed San Juan and could lessen the danger to the U.S. mainland.

"The storm with winds 140 miles per hour, has turned enough so that Puerto Rico 'will get off relatively easy,'" said chief forecaster Gordon Dunn of the Miami Weather Bureau.

"The slight northward curve and a slowing in forward movement of the hurricane give a very favorable indication that it will miss the mainland," Dunn said.

"However, we are not emphasizing that. We would like a little more confirmation of the new course before making any forecasts."

An 8 a.m. advisory from the San Juan weather bureau placed the storm center 75 miles east-northeast of San Juan and 1,050 miles east-southeast of Miami, the nearest mainland point.

It was moving toward the west-northwest at about 15 m.p.h., and the shift in course indicated it would pass 70 to 80 miles north of San Juan.

Hurricane warnings were continued on the north and east coasts of Puerto Rico, but Dunn said: "This is only a precautionary measure. There is no chance that area will get the full force of the storm."

The coastal area was in for strong winds, rough seas and heavy rains. Residents of lowland regions were alerted for high tides and flooding.

The storm center passed directly over the island of Barbuda, which has a population of about 12,000, Dunn said. It came close.

U. S. Newsman Shot, Killed in the Congo

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (AP) — Henry Noble Taylor, 32, a correspondent for Scripps-Howard newspapers, was shot and killed Sunday while reporting the fighting between Congolese army troops and armed civilians supporting Albert Kalonji in Kasai province.

Reports reaching Leopoldville were fragmentary but the American Embassy said Taylor apparently had been hit by machinegun fire.

The correspondent was the son of Henry J. Taylor, former radio commentator and now U.S. ambassador to Switzerland.

The correspondent arrived in the Congo only five days ago. He left Saturday morning for Lubumbashi and Bakwanga to report the fighting there between the government and secessionists which has caused hundreds of deaths.

U.N. sources said Taylor and three other correspondents with him had been warned in Bakwanga not to attempt to reach Tchilenge, where the Congolese army was attacking a large group of armed Kalonji men and refugees. Bakwanga was set up by Kalonji as the capital of his secessionist mining state.

It is not known definitely where Taylor was shot or who was with him.

Henry Tanner, correspondent for the New York Times, and two French correspondents, Eugene Mammon of Le Monde and Jacques Chapuis of France Soir, had gone to Bakwanga with him.

Apparently Taylor was driving toward Tchilenge, some 16 miles from Bakwanga, when he was shot. In order to reach Tchilenge it is necessary to cross the Boucheimaye River.

The body was flown back to Lubumbashi, capital of Kasai province, and a plane of the U.S. Embassy in Leopoldville left to return it to Leopoldville.

The shooting apparently occurred about noon. Tchilenge has been surrounded by Congolese army troops for several days because hundreds of refugees of the Baluba tribe rushed there when the army occupied other villages in the region. Both Katanga to the northeast and Tchilenge to the southwest of Tchilenge are in army hands.

The refugees and Kalonji's fighters were reported making a stand in Tchilenge with whatever weapons they possess, mostly old-fashioned rifles.

U.N. sources said Taylor died instantly.

Holiday Death Toll Is Close to Estimate

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Traffic 327
Boating 20
Drowning 52
Miscellaneous 53
Total 454

Homeward-bound motorists jammed the nation's highways Monday as the grim toll of traffic fatalities, running neck-and-neck with those of last Labor Day, crept upward.

The National Safety Council issued a warning to holiday-weary drivers not to let their guard down. "Give yourselves extra time and take extra care," the council pleaded.

As of noon EDT, the Associated Press counted 327 dead on the highways, 20 killed in boating accidents, 52 drowned and 53 dead in various accidents, for an overall total of 454.

The figures prompted the council to fear the final traffic count would come "tragically close" to its pre-holiday estimate of 460.

The record toll for a Labor Day weekend was 461 in 1951. Mild weather and the summer season's last weekend holiday lured millions of motorists onto the highways. The heaviest travel of the holiday is indicated today, with millions heading for home.

The council said 73 million motor vehicles would be on the highways sometime during the holiday period.

If the council's estimate is reached, the toll would be 130 more highway fatalities than estimated by the council for a non-holiday weekend of the same length at this time of the year.

The Associated Press, for comparative purposes, made a survey of a nonholiday weekend from 6 p.m. Friday, Aug. 19 to midnight Monday, Aug. 22. It showed 389 traffic deaths, 34 boating fatalities, 61 drownings and 90 deaths in miscellaneous accidents, an overall total of 574.

Traffic deaths in the first seven months this year totaled 20,540, nearly 100 a day.

Classes Start Tuesday at Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Classes begin Tuesday in what officials expect to be the calmest school opening here since a federal court first ordered integration.

Twelve Negroes are scheduled to attend two once-white high schools. The number was reduced by one Saturday when the Little Rock School Board granted the request of Everett Dixon Morehead to be transferred from integrated Central High School to all-Negro Horace Mann High.

Morehead, who earlier had asked to be re-assigned to Central, gave no reason for wanting to switch back.

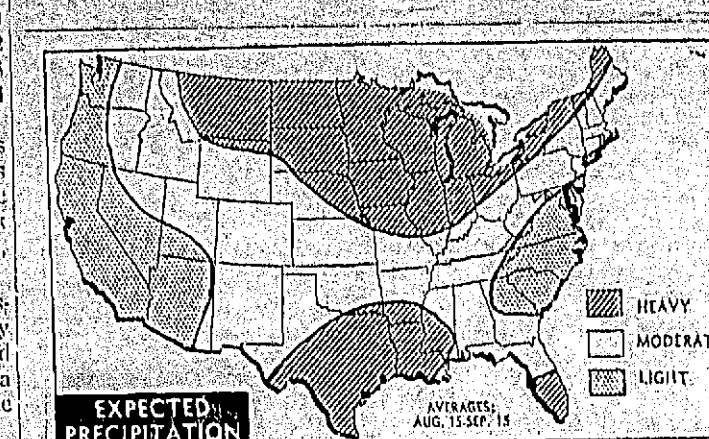

No organized opposition is in sight this year. In 1957, violence flared when nine Negroes first desegregated Central. Gov. Orval E. Faubus closed the high schools the next year. There was a brief clash last year when the high schools were reopened.

A police spokesman said a few officers would be sent to Central and Hall, the other integrated high school.

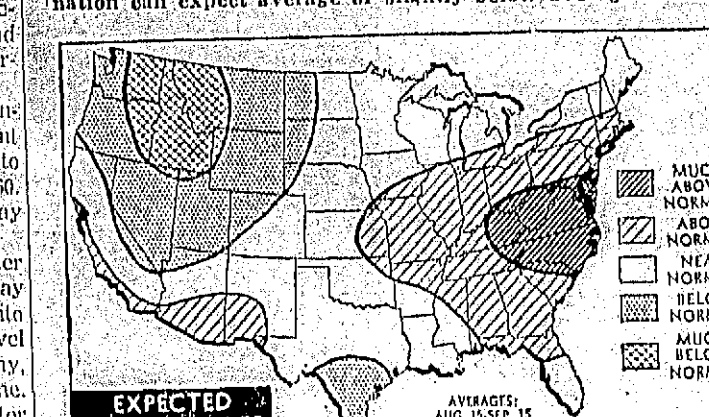

Integration begins for the first time Wednesday at another district.

Fire Guts School at Harrisburg

HARRISBURG, Ark. (AP) — Fire destroyed the Harrisburg High School gymnasium Sunday night, causing loss estimated at more than $150,000. Sheriff C. T. Sullivan ordered an arson investigation.

The sheriff said there was a strong possibility of arson. He said that last Tuesday football players returning from practice had discovered a fire in the equipment room, which was extinguished with minor damage.

Sullivan said he had started an arson inquiry after the earlier fire. He has asked the State Police fire marshal's office for assistance.

Fireman from Harrisburg and Marked Tree battled the fire for several hours before bringing it under control. At one point flames leaped to the roof of a nearby elementary school, causing minor damage. Two other buildings also were threatened for a time.

Nolan McCalla, a volunteer fireman who lives near the school, said he was the first man on the scene. He said a window was open, but all the doors were locked.

Flames from the equipment room were shooting under wooden bleachers, he said. Virgil Wayman, a saw filer while passing by on the way home from church and reported the fire.

"The building, a block and brick veneer structure, was built in 1951."

Included in the loss was $5,000 worth of new football and basketball uniforms and other athletic equipment.

Red-Backed Lumumba Gets Stronger

By LYNN HEINZERLING

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (AP) — Premier Patrice Lumumba's forces appeared to be strengthening their position in crushing the secessionist revolt in Kasai province today as a rebel column pulled back.

But Gen. Victor Lundula, commander of the Congolese army, and a group of officers flew to Lubumbashi, capital of Kasai province, in a Soviet plane to meet the challenge of another rebel force in Kasai.

Diplomatic observers said Soviet military support of Lumumba forces outside the United Nations peace effort appeared certain to bring strong Western objections.

The Soviet Union endorsed the U. N. Security Council resolution to send a task force to the Congo but appeared to be directing their own aid in the Congo apart from the U. N. effort to restore order.

Baluba tribesmen loyal to Premier Albert Kalonji, who is trying to set up a separate state in Kasai, were reported making hit and run attacks on Lumumba's forces who captured Bakwanga.

Bakwanga is the capital of the "Mineral state" Kalonji created in southern Kasai.

Kalonji was mounting his counterattack from neighboring secessionist Katanga province with a makeshift band of volunteers led by white officers, mostly Belgians.

Armed with rifles and a few Belgian automatic weapons, the volunteers were reported moving in two columns.

Advices reaching Elisabethville, capital of Katanga, said one column of about 250 uniformed troops was making a steady advance into Kasai without running into opposition.

The second column ran into difficulties after crossing the crocodile-infested Lubila River on the Katanga-Kasai border.

Approaching Lupata, a town 20 miles inside Kasai, scouts reportedly found most tribes in the area favored Lumumba. The volunteers withdrew.

In Elisabethville, a Katanga army spokesman said there were reports that the Congo army was building up for a strike into Katanga with movements of troops from Stanleyville, Lumumba's stronghold in northeast Congo, to Lubumbashi, capital of Kasai.

Death Closes Out Political 'Dynasty'

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — Former Gov. Earl Kemp Long, last chief of a vanishing Louisiana political dynasty, died today.

"The 65-year-old former governor, 'just turned over in his bed and died,'" said his physician, Dr. R. U. Parrott.

Long was hospitalized 10 days ago, the day he was nominated in a Democratic primary to the U.S. House of Representatives in Louisiana's 6th Dist.

There were persistent reports that the fiery Long had suffered another heart attack, but his doctors refused to confirm such reports. Long had been in an oxygen tent since Sunday.

Dr. Parrott said Long had spent a reasonably good night Sunday night.

His first attack came in 1950 while chasing a hog on his "pea patch" farm near Winnfield. He had been reported as a heart patient for several years.

Long, brother of the late U.S. senator and Louisiana "Kingfish" Huey P. Long and uncle of U.S. Sen. Russell Long, bounced back into the political picture in the August congressional election after he failed in an attempt for another term as governor.

State law prohibits a governor from succeeding himself, but Long once indicated he would resign shortly before his term ended last spring and then run for reelection. He didn't, but tried for the lieutenant governor's office and lost.

Long amazed the nation and most of the world last summer when he was sent to two mental hospitals and then went on a tour that included most of the western United States and parts of Mexico.

He went to a Galveston, Tex., mental hospital in a scene that almost defied description. His wife and Sen. Long issued the orders for him to be flown to Galveston.

The move came after Long erupted during a session of the State Legislature when he called one of his cohorts a "dago" and used profane language with Roman Catholic nuns and school children in the audience.

A court order released him from the Galveston clinic and he went to a New Orleans hospital. But he flew the coop quickly and left for the state capital at Baton Rouge.

On his wife's orders he was arrested and confined to a mental unit at Mandeville, La. Another court hearing released him.

Bombing Case Again Delayed

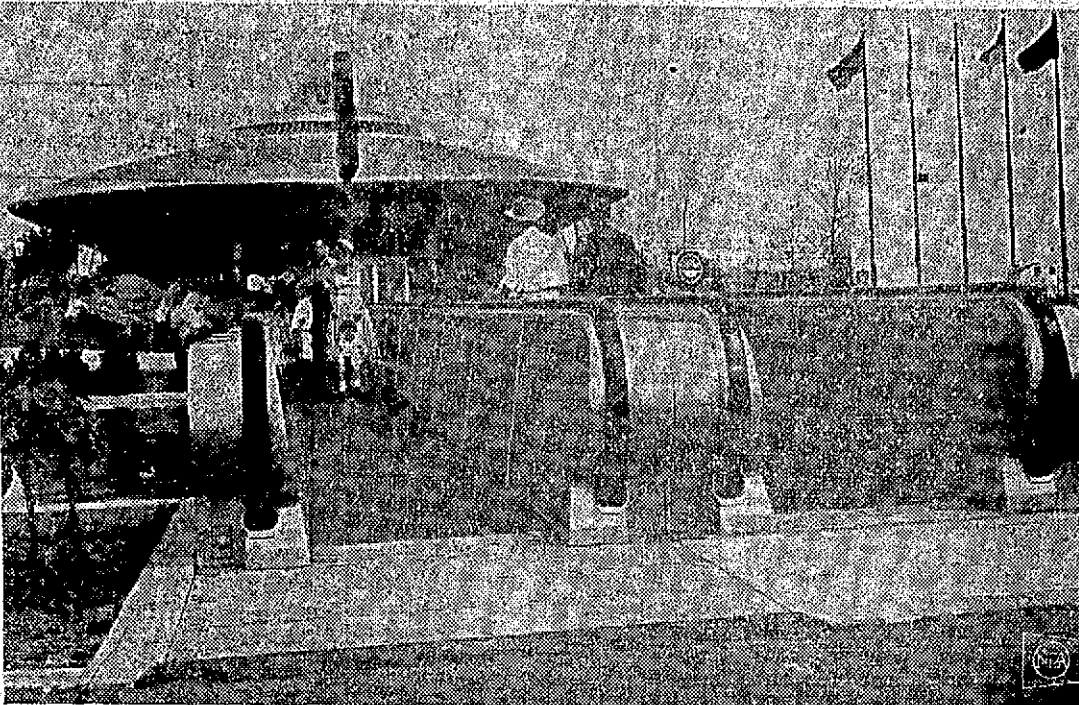

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Trial of Samuel Graydon Beavers, 49, the last of five men charged in three integration-related bombings here last Labor Day, has been postponed again.
Circuit Judge William J. Kirby, who earlier had delayed the trial from its original date of Dec. 29, 1959, granted another delay until Oct. 2. Both were because of Beavers' ill health.
He is charged with dynamiting the business office of Mayor Werner C. Knop.

One man pleaded guilty in the bombings and is in prison and three others were convicted but are appealing their prison sentences.

CHAPTER XXV

The marshal flushed. "Not the same thing at all Trone's been outlawed; all I got is your word, yours against theirs, and no witnesses." He peered at Brett. "I mind how it was in the old days," he grumbled. "Up pops Brett Fasken and just like that you got trouble." He shook his head irritably. "Bud Lahr rode in. He fetched a signed statement from Ollie's wife namin' you."

"Never seen the woman," Ollie must've identified you. She claims you rode up right after they'd lit the lamps. Says you called Ollie out and shot him." Stoker growled. "He didn't even have a gun on him."

Brett stared darkly. Trone hadn't fired his. "Right about then I was..." He let the rest go, knowing the futility of anything he might say. Talk wasn't going to help; they were past talk. That day in the Mercantile at Packer's Crossing, in front of Syd Stoker, Schultz's terror had sown the seeds of this. Like ly told his wife about it. Ollie with a guilty conscience about that water he'd forced off had been scared to death of Brett. If the lamps had been lit and it happened the way Stoker told it, Schultz couldn't have seen anything, but he could have called out Brett's name. It was Brett that had put his wind up—Brett coming back and all this trouble cropping up.

Brett considered the marshal wearily. "If you're out of your ballistics for Tice and Flager—" "That's right. Off my range. No authority at all. Just reckon you probably better know about Schultz." He regarded the bone buttons of Brett's shirt. "If Trone'd been alive I might of done somethin'—aimed to." He made a querulous shift of one arm, eyeing Lola. He wiped sweat out o' this wrinkles and, setting Trone's gun against a post, he squared his shoulders, again peering at Brett. "Nothin' personal, understand, but if I should see you in town I'll have to take you." Brett didn't answer. The marshal, facing Lola, took off his hat. "You better come along an' stay a spell at the Crossin'. I could sort of keep an eye out—better anyway. You can't stay here."

The girl, ignoring him, was still watching Brett. "That's right," Brett said, "Bound to get rougher 'fore it gets any better. You go on in to town. I'll watch the place." "I'm not going anywhere." Stokers breath weaseled out in a kind of long sign. He put on his hat and tramped across the dust and got into his saddle and put the horse about. He wasn't old in years but he was feeling every one of them.

In a way Brett, watching him out of sight, felt sorry for him. Fifty wasn't too old for a man to think about a woman. He could tell by Lola's face most of the shock had worn away. What she needed right now was a good hard cry and going into that house would likely take care of it.

Brett got his blanket off the corral and covered Trone to keep the flies off. He went to the barn to find a shovel.

All the while Brett was digging his thoughts plunged uncontrollably on, round and around, trying to find some fissure of hope; some way he might yet pull a measure of security out of this mess for Trone's sister. There didn't look to be a chance and the knowledge lay sour in his belly that only a gun could finish some kinds of trouble, that no gun would be doing this in the hands of Brett Fasken.

He stared down at them bitterly—strong, big, capable hands, as useless in this deal as bloomers on a heifer. That kid, Bill Tice certainly, and probably even Syd Stoker, could shoot circles around him, cut him into doll rags.

But only two or three people—four at most—pulled the strings. Tice, Rhode Island Red, Flager maybe, and Stoker by the grace of Jo Fasken and that badge.

With luck a man might work on those others, spook or maneuver them; to where, one by one.

A fine thought. Might be something to it if a man could shove a gun up against them. Back to guns.

He fetched a tarp and rolled Trone in it. He would like to have given him a full-rig funeral; might have shaken some people to see Vic laid out with all those bullet holes. Might have made them think a little, take a sharper look at what this country was headed for.

The weather was against it. Carrying Trone over to the hole he eased him in.

He leveled off the grave, tramping the dirt down somberly, scattering what was left across the indentations of his tracks, telling himself he had to get out of here, knowing he would not go.

He was stuck with this now. The wolves were showing their

U. S. Swim Team Shows Up Best

By JERRY LISKA

Associated Press Sport Writer

ROME (AP)—While America's track team got the buildup, is Uncle Sam's swimming squad which has delivered the gold medals in the 1960 Olympic Games.

What was supposed to have been a three-nation aquatic scrap involving Australia, Japan and the United States was turned into a rout by the fast-paddling American boys and girls.

As the Olympic swimming competition closed Saturday night, the United States owned 11 of 19 possible gold medals. Australia salvaged five firsts, while Germany's statuesque Ingrid Kramer took the two women's diving (lille and England's Anita Lonsbrough won the women's 200-meter breaststroke).

"This was a tremendously dedicated team," said U.S. head swimming coach Gus Stager of the University of Michigan.

"Everybody just swam like he or she was trying to make the varsity team whether it was in preliminary heat or for the gold medal."

America's men swimmers harvested six of 10 swimming titles. The women—or girls, since they averaged just under 16 years old—look five of nine titles.

If a U.S. swimming hero had to be picked, it probably would be free stylist Jeff Farrell of Wichita, Kan., at least on a sentimental basis.

Farrell, who nearly missed making the American team because of an appendectomy, swam the anchor lap twice the same night on the victorious U.S. medley and freestyle relay teams.

America's swimming heroine has to be Chris Von Saltza, 16, Saratoga, Calif., who won three gold medals and one silver medal, an unprecedented American swimming feat.

The 5-10, 140-pound Miss Von Saltza won the 400-meter freestyle, anchored the American medley and freestyle relay teams and was second in the 120-meter freestyle.

Unquestionably this was the greatest American aquatic group ever to appear in Olympic competition. In the 1956 games at Melbourne, the United States won only two men's gold medals and three women's titles.

There were 1,430 life insurance companies in the United States on June 30, 1960—28 more than a year ago.

About one-third of the nation's dairy cows two years old and over were bred artificially in 1959, an increase of 17 percent over 1958.

part of the pattern is clipped.

Dogs of the long, flat-coated varieties, such as setters and spaniels should be brushed, combed and bathed, and excess feathers removed around the ears and wherever else it might add to the dog's comfort.

Terriers and dogs with hard coats should be stripped, not clipped.

Stripping may be removing all old coat completely by plucking with the stripping comb, leaving the dog clean all over, but with no particular furnishings to add stylish appearance such as would be done solely to give the kennel dog or house pet comfort, or in such fashion as to remove all dead coat and trim the remaining coat so as to shape up the dog, leaving "furnishings."

Stripping in style as would prepare a dog for show, or exhibit its breed and type to best advantage, is done by grasping the coat between the thumb on one side and the stripping comb on the other. By pulling straight out, the old coat comes out and the new coat slides between the thumb and comb.

On parts which are to be trimmed short, the trimming comb is then twisted so that the blade cuts the remaining hair to the right length.

Clipping leaves all the dead coat—only cutting it short. Stripping removes the dead coat, and may include shaping the dog by proper cutting of the remaining coat.

When possible—except on poodles—brush, comb, or strip—don't clip.

TWO MINUTE MYSTERY

THE CASE OF THE LINCOLN LETTER

By DONALD J. SOBOL

"It might be genuine," murmured Dr. Fry, chief of the crime lab. Inspector Winters peered through a magnifying glass at the ragged sheet of foolscap. He read the writing, from which part had been torn.

"...in Gettysburg at the Wills home facing the public square. Bands blared, serenading whomever spoke. I begged to be excused. The crowd was little pleased. The band played the National Anthem and moved on to Seward's..."

The last sentence ran into a tear. However, the signature was unmarred—"A Lincoln."

"It might be worth tens of thousands of dollars," said Dr. Fry. "For an incomplete letter of President Lincoln?" Inquired the inspector. "Are they that rare?"

"Look at the reverse side," advised Dr. Fry.

The inspector released a low whistle of astonishment. On the other side of the sheet was scrawled a partial draft of the Gettysburg address. "I found it by accident in the old Bible my sister keeps in the attic," said Sy "The Weasel" McCloskey.

"Wasn't that where you found the counterfeit issue last year?" put in the inspector sarcastically.

Dr. Fry interrupted. "I'll run some chemical tests on the paper. It'll take a couple of days."

"The paper turned out to be the right age," a surprised inspector Winters reported to Dr. Haledjian. "I'll wager you'll never guess the value of that one little sheet!"

"About 10 cents—so a police man to the heavily populated French-Dutch island of St. Martin, British Sombrero, British Anegada, and the eastern Virgin Islands.

"This is a dangerous hurricane," the Weather Bureau said in an official warning issued at 5 a.m. to the islanders and ships at sea. Small craft were told to remain in port and bigger vessels to "exercise extreme caution."

Packing winds up to 140 miles-an-hour in the center, Donna churned over a terrific area with the Weather Bureau reporting "little change in size or intensity is expected for the next 12 hours."

St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands reported gusts up to 60 miles per hour early today, and higher velocities were reported from the Leeward Islands before communications failed. The Weather Bureau said.

Thousands of residents along the Puerto Rican coast fled to higher ground. Alerts went out as far north as the American mainland as Donna took the same course as storms which hit Florida in 1926 and 1928, causing millions of dollars in damage and killing nearly 2,000 persons.

Barges Into Berlin Halted by E. Germans

By CARL HARTMAN

BERLIN (AP)—A stoppage of traffic on one of the canals leading to isolated Berlin piled up 23 barges today on the Iron Curtain border, the city government reported.

The barge traffic was halted with the end of East Germany's restrictions, imposed five days ago, on other travel to West Berlin.

Transport officials said the barges, loaded with cement, were held up at Schnackenburg, an inland port on the Elbe River where the river forms the border between East and West Germany.

It was not immediately clear if the stoppage was politically inspired. West Berliners recalled however, that the 1948-49 blockade began with trouble on the canals.

The officials said the barges were refused entry to East Germany on the ground that the water level in the Havel River leading into Berlin was too low.

A shippers' proposal to use an alternate route was rejected by East German transport officials, who said that agreements on access to Berlin require use of only the shortest route. The Communist officials suggested that some of the cargo be removed to reduce the draft of the barges. The shippers were reluctant to do this.

The East German regime claimed a victory in its travel restriction campaign, avowedly intended to prevent "revenge meetings of militarists" in West Berlin.

There were predictions in West Berlin of more trouble from the Communists.

Rookie Driver Dies in Wreck

MEMPHIS (AP) The first turn in the first race on opening night at the New Lakeland stock car race track was the end of the road for rookie driver Norris J. Maxwell.

Maxwell, 28, of Memphis, died late Saturday night of injuries received when his souped up 1943 Ford rammed straight into a big utility pole.

It happened when two cars ahead of Maxwell sideswiped and started spinning on the dirt track, raising a thick cloud of dust. Maxwell's car roared from the dust cloud out of control.

The spectators included Maxwell's wife and their 7-year-old son Jerry.

"I was scared of racing," sobbed Mrs. Maxwell. "But I didn't want to be a nagging wife and I made the best of it."

Just Needed a Place to Sleep

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Someone saw a man climbing a fence into a cemetery and called police. Work spread that the man might be an escaped convict and all officers on duty were summoned to the scene Saturday night.

Police surrounded the cemetery then sent a part of searchers in. They were made wary by the thought that 44-year-old Melvin Lindley, a murderer who escaped from Cummins Prison last week, might be hiding there.

The searchers spied a man lying on a mausoleum. Cautiously they approached — to find it was a vagrant who needed a place to sleep.

Police supplied the man a jail cell — on a vagrancy charge. Lindley still hasn't been found.

The Statue of Liberty, a 152-foot female figure, is made of copper. It weighs 225 tons.

Weather Bureau said many other hurricanes starting along the same path swung away before reaching the mainland, however.

Bracing for the worst, Puerto Rico schools were turned into shelters by the Red Cross and civil defense officials for residents of low-lying coastal areas.

There was a rush to stores to stock up on fresh milk and bread. All police, firemen and hospital staffs went on round-the-clock duty.

Bright colors, bold patterns and a personal touch banish the institutional blandness of the college dormitory room. Ready-made cotton draperies in a glad plaid of red and white were shortened to suit length and excess fabric used to cover two pillows on bed. Background in a mosaic-textured pattern repeats the clear red. Abstract center ring is in shades of red and white. Wicker foot locker doubles as clothes storage hamper. Wicker wall accessories are light and easy to hang on stick-on hooks.

Budget Spread for School or College

TO ADD A GAY, CHEERFUL NOTE to dormitory room, or for a teenager's room at home, "Elmridge" bedspread and matching draperies are a practical solution. In sizes to fit single bed or studio couches, this homespun weave comes in four lively plaid color combinations, predominantly russet brown, apple red, verdant blue, and evergreen. The spread has practical rounded corners.

According to Ruth Leigh, Director of Cannon Homemaking Service, this long-wearing spread and matching draperies can go to the college laundry, will not shrink and need no ironing. Costing under ten dollars each, this spread and draperies are so strong that they will last many years.

DOROTHY DIX Should Long-Suffering Wife Take Repentant Husband Back?

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen:

About 18 months ago I wrote you that my husband's friend had come to me demanding I give him his freedom. You said I held the trump cards—my marriage and our two sons—and to hang on. This was also the advice of our mutual friend and my husband's boss, who incidentally, is a bachelor.

You were both so right! She is beginning to tire of waiting for one of our homes and the use of the car. She is only 24 and my husband neither dances nor drinks.

A few weeks ago he came to me for the first time and asked me what I was going to do. Can we accept him back into our home and be happy? Can we love again? He was so very precious to us all. Should I consult our boys: it concerns their lives as well as mine.

Your letter has been read so many times. —M. K. N.

Dear Mrs. K. N.: Yes, consult with your son and, if you love your husband, forgive and forget—but be sure you do forget. By sheer force of will, and it will take plenty, wipe the past out of your consciousness. Look forward, not back.

When, and if you and your husband are reunited, remember that you are starting a new life. Make it a second honeymoon!

Dear Helen:

One evening when my boy friend and two other couples were leaving after a visit at my house — when we were outside my boy friend gave me a goodnight kiss. My mother reminded me that it would have been better had she given special goodnight kisses to me. My father disapproved greatly and said I shouldn't kiss any boy till I'm sure I want to marry him. I'm only a teenager and don't want to marry anyone. I know I'm not a "puppy love" girl. I suppose I agree with my mother about not "puppy kissing" a good night kiss, but I do think a goodnight kiss is fine even though I'm not engaged. We are going steady though. What is and luck against you.

The Orioles Clobber Yanks for Loop Lead

BY JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rocket throwers Mill Pappas, Jack Fisher and Chuck Estrada have yet to cast their first vote in a presidential election. But next month they may all pitch in their first World Series.

The three young speed ballers parlayed their pitching into a last weekend for New York as the amazing Baltimore Orioles swept the three-game series to take a firm two-game hold on first place over the Yankees in the American League.

Estrada, oldest of the trio at 22, put the finishing touch to the sweep with a 6-2 triumph Sunday before 34,587 screaming Baltimore spectators. Friday, Pappas, 21, shut out the Yankees on three hits. The next day, Fisher, also 21, blanked them on seven.

Estrada, a freshman from San Luis, Okla., Calif., had a no-hitter until Bill Skowron singled with two out in the seventh inning and a shutout until Gil McDougald drove in Clellis Boyer with one out in the eighth.

The Orioles' victory also increased their lead to 3 1/2 games over the Chicago White Sox, who split with Detroit. The Sox won the second game 5-4 after the Tigers had taken the opener 6-4. Boston nipped Washington 5-4 and Cleveland trounced Kansas City 10-2.

Pittsburgh increased its National League lead to 6 1/2 games over Milwaukee, defeating Philadelphia 5-3 as Cincinnati was beating the Braves 9-5. St. Louis nipped Chicago 4-3 and San Francisco faltered Los Angeles 8-3.

Woody Held, recently returned from the disabled list, smashed two home runs and a double and drove in six runs as Cleveland won its 13th straight from the Athletics. Jack Harshman recorded his second victory against four defeats. Bud Daley, pounded for five runs in three innings, dropped his 14th against 13 victories.

Rookie Jim Pagliarini smashed a home run and two doubles to lead the Red Sox to victory over Washington. The bonus catcher scored the deciding run in the eighth when he doubled and came home on a triple by Don Gillo, another rookie.

A two-run homer by Steve Bilko and a solo shot by Eddie Yost won the opener for Jim Bunning and the Tigers as Chicago's Frank Baumann was saddled with his sixth loss in 15 decisions. Sammy Espino's ninth-inning single drove pitcher Al Worthington home with the winning run in the nightcap.

A virus sidelined Nellie Fox, snapping the White Sox second baseman's consecutive playing streak at 798 games.

State Court Resumes Session

LITTLE ROCK (AP) - The Arkansas Supreme Court returned from a three-month vacation today and began work on the 150 civil and criminal cases before the court.

No opinions will be handed down until next week.

Among the appeals confronting the court are those of four men convicted in three bombings here last Labor Day and those of several Negro college students convicted in sit-in demonstrations at segregated Little Rock lunch counters.

Also before the high court are appeals from a denial of a change of venue of nineteen persons arrested during a demonstration near Central High School Aug. 12, 1959.

In a criminal case, Mrs. Virginia Rand seeks reversal of her conviction an eight-year prison term for the fatal shooting of H.V. Clark of Rogers.

The average January temperature in Montreal is 13 degrees.

Smackover Is Tops in Dist. Jamboree

Vince Foster
Hope Star Sports Writer

The Smackover Buckaroos slid by Fairview and then overpowered Hope to win the Camden Jamboree, Sept. 2 at Coleman Field. Taking second honors were the Bobcats who beat Camden 7-0 and then were bounced 14-0 by Smackover. Camden took third place by tripping Fairview 6-0.

Fairview's superb defense held the mighty Smackover team in the first 15 minute game, but the Cardinals were topped by the Bucks' five first downs to the Red Birds none. Smackover scored twice only to have the TDs called back by two of the many penalties of the night. The smaller Cardinals rushed hard and held the Bucks to only one penetration of the 20 yard line.

The Bobcats proved their team work ability and their will to win as they slashed the Camden Panthers 7-0 in the second 15-minute game of the Jamboree. The scoring drive went as follows:

Camden's ball on their own 15. The center of the Hope line hit the Panther QB hard and knocked the ball loose. 210 pound tackle Tommy Mosier covered for Hope. Bobcats' ball on the Camden 14. Lloyd bounces to the 12. A quickie pass incomplete. Five yards penalty. Hope on the Camden 18. Lloyd hits Duke at the 12 and Joe scampers home. Dukes' conversion was good. Bobcats 7 and Panthers 0.

A large crowd of Bobcat Boosters saw Bill Walters holding Camden to short gains and then later they saw Lloyd and Duke scampering for good yardage. Once in the game Panther Sprigenger received a Jordan aerial and scooted down to the Hope four, where he was tripped up. But this 38 yard pass play was called back because of a clipping penalty. The buzzer sounded with the Cats 7, Camden 0.

In the consolation game, Camden found the leak in the Fairview defense as 182 pound speedster Bill Deal out ran the Cardinals 13 yards for the score. The PAT failed, but a half dozen points were enough for the Panthers to take Fairview.

The Buckaroos, averaging 175 pounds, overpowered the smaller Bobcats 14-0 to take the first place title in the Jamboree. 200 pounder Joe Black, who runs hard like former Bobcat Don Boethe, and Bob Burnett slipped through the Hope line making large holes in the Bobcat's spirit each time. The Cats, outweighed 18 pounds per man, could not hold the big Smackover team. Black and Lewie converted Hope's mistakes into two Buck TDs. Black kicked both PATs. Although Arnett and Porterfield tried to pull the game out of the fire, the buzzer sounded with Smackover 14, Hope 0.

Head Coach John Pierce had this comment on the Hope-Camden game, "You could see the boys' improvement." He said, "I think they played good ball in the first game."

Pirates Look Like Cinch for Pennant

By JOE REICHLER

Associated Press Sports Writer
Pittsburgh, boasting a 6½ game lead, looks like a cinch today to win the National League pennant, but strange things have happened before to sure pennant winners, including the Pirates.

Back in 1938 on this day—September 5—the Pirates apparently were on the way to their first pennant since 1927. With only 25 games left to play, they held an imposing six-game lead over the Chicago Cubs.

The Pirates' won only 11 of their final 24 (one game ended in a tie) while the Cubs won 20 of their

THE BOYS ARE SHOWN ON AN OLD cannon at the U. S. National Military Park at Vicksburg, Miss., a historic memorial to the Civil War.

THE SCENIC RAILWAY AT LAKE PONTCHARTRAIN, New Orleans was busy for a while as the boys rode it four times and would probably be there yet if their money had lasted.

OTHER POINTS OF INTEREST ON THE tour included Audubon Park, zoo, docks along the Mississippi River, Jackson Square and St. Louis Cathedral, old state capitol at Baton Rouge, LSU, Sugar Bowl, Ocean Drive, Army Corps of Engineers Waterway Experiment Station, old battle field at Vicksburg and points of interest at Gulfport and Biloxi, Miss.

Russia Gets Better With Every Olympic

By WILL GRIMSLEY

Associated Press Sports Writer
ROME (AP)—It's the same old story in the Olympics. The Soviets are getting better. In the longtime American specialties and the Yanks are making few inroads into the big muscle and stamina events dominated by the Reds.

So, even though Uncle Sam sent his greatest array of track and field record-breakers in history to these games, and a swimming team which won 11 gold medals, the Soviets keep pushing ahead in the race for the unofficial team championship.

With gymnastics, almost a Soviet religion, starting on the agenda today, there appears little hope of closing the gap of the Soviet lead.

Now sportsmen are wondering how long it will be before the Soviets are able to take the United States in basketball, a sport which the Americans never have dropped a contest.

A towering, talented U.S. team won its vital meeting with the Soviet Union before a swelling, screaming crowd Saturday night, 81-57. But it wasn't easy.

The Soviets throttled Oscar (Big O) Robertson, the great All-American from Cincinnati, in the first half as they limited him to a single field goal and held the half-time score to 35-28.

A 20-point spurge during the first five minutes of the final half pulled the game out of danger for the Americans.

The Soviets looked good on defense. They were aggressive and equal to the Americans. They were fast and clever in ball-handling. But they couldn't shoot. If the Russians had even a pair of men who could hit from the outside, they would have caused much more trouble.

The one striking feature of these 17th games in the eternal city has been the "new look" of the Soviet athletes.

It used to be easy to single out Soviet athletes in the village. They were always dowdy and uncommunicative. They seldom wore a loyered more than a few feet beyond their own quarters.

Now the Soviets, in their blue sweat suits with the letters "CCCP" across the chest, walk the village with a light and bouncy step. They wave. They stop and chat. They swap pins.

They are younger, trimmer, both men and women.

They still are a regimented, dedicated team of athletes—supported and driven by the state—but they have picked up Western mannerisms—and with them, Western sports techniques.

In 1936, the Russians didn't win a medal in cycling, said a U.S. official. "This year they won one gold medal and five bronze." In the next Olympics, don't be surprised if its five golds.

As hammer thrower Hal Connolly put it, to the Soviets the Olympics is "war." They are determined to be the best. It may take a similar determination to head them off.

The Bears' Zeko Bratkowski completed 18 of 31 passes—one a 75-yard scoring aerial to rookie John Farrington—as the inept Redskins lost their fourth in a row. Eagle Day handled the quarterbacking chores in a revamped Washington offensive and defensive lineup.

Touchdown heaves of 62 and 45 yards from veteran Norm G. Brocklin to Tommy McDonald highlighted the Eagles' rout of Detroit at Norman, Okla., the scene of McDonald's collegiate epics. Ken Welsh scored the Lions' lone TD on a 79-yard run.

Bobby Mitchell ran 52 yards for a Browns' touchdown, then took a Mill Plum pitch 75 yards for the clinching score against the 49ers. San Francisco's Hugh McElhenny led the ground-gainers with 115 yards in 11 attempts, including a 6-yard TD blast.

The Rams Buddy Humphrey and Billy Wade each passed for two touchdowns. The Cowboys also got their two touchdowns via aerials, one thrown by Don Heinrich and the other by Don Meredith.
